

THE DEAD ALIVE!
One of New York's Most Prominent Professional Men, Supposed to Have Been Dead, Is Found Alive and Happy.
AN UNPARALLELED STORY OF MADNESS, ALLEGED DEATH AND MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

"SAIREY GAMP" IN REAL LIFE.
Straight from Dickens's "Martin Chuzzlewit" to Sixty-first Street.
A LIFE OF UPS AND DOWNS.
The Five Thousand Men Who Run New York Elevators and What They Earn.

"BLIND LOVE!"
Wilkie Collins's Last and Greatest Romance Still Running in the SUNDAY WORLD.

SIDE NOTES FROM LONDON.
Belva Lockwood's Passing Comment on English Happenings.

THE DEAD ALIVE.
One of New York's Most Prominent Professional Men, Supposed to Have Been Dead, Is Found Alive and Happy.
Read the Sunday World.
An Astonishing Story of Ambition, Madness and Mysterious Disappearance.

SERVE ALL ALIKE.
Prof. Hermann's Appeal for Little Freddy Clark.
He Says Favoritism is Shown to Some Child-Actors.

A deal of experience has been crowded into the eighty-one months of Freddy Clark's existence, and he is more accomplished than 999 out of every thousand men of middle age. About as big as a Jersey "dickie," he stepped up to an Evening World reporter, who was presented by Manager Rosenquest, of the Bijou, and placing a thin, pearl-white little hand in the capacious maw of the newspaper man, and with a bright, half-smiling smile lighting up his big brown eyes, said: "How do you do?"

The little chap was dressed in a sailor blouse of blue, with red and white stripes in the open collar, and a layard of white muscine-remained of the tiny watch in a tiny pocket. Blue knee-breeches, black stockings and shoes, a blue high-top cap and a brown Fall overcoat completed the outfit.

"I've been troubled with a slight cold," said the small voice, and had been to a Spanish doctor this morning. "How much do I weigh? Oh, twenty pounds."

The little chap weighs about thirty-five pounds, and is a very accomplished child-actor. He is making a living by singing and dancing in Prof. Hermann's show at the Bijou for his alleged father, an actor. Mr. Jenkins's ex-act to stop the night's appearance of the boy, and the reporter saw the boy's party at Jefferson Market Police Court this morning. Justice Ford will hear both sides on Tuesday afternoon.

FIT ESCORT TO HIS TOMB.
CAPT. SANDERS TO HAVE A GREAT POLICE FUNERAL TO-MORROW.

Supt. Murray, All the Inspectors and the High Bridge police, whose death occurred yesterday, will take place to-morrow afternoon at 1 o'clock from his residence, 147 East Ninetieth street.

The family has consented to allow a police escort to accompany the funeral to Calvary Cemetery. Reno Post will also accompany it.

The police escort will be in full uniform, and will consist of the members of the late Captain's command and other picked men. Supt. Murray, Inspectors Byrnes, Steers, Williams and Conlin, the Police Commissioners and the captains of the various precincts will attend. A set of appropriate resolutions have been adopted, and they will be engrossed and sent to the Captain's widow.

The following were appointed a committee on resolutions: Inspector Peter Conlin, Capt. John H. McLaughlin, Capt. Joseph B. Zakim, Capt. John Gunner and Capt. Peter Yule.

IN BYRNES'S GRIP.
Cashier Burton Leach a Secret Prisoner at Headquarters.

Alleged to Have Robbed the United States Hotel of Large Sums.

The Inspector and Proprietor Herdling Refuse to Give Particulars.

Inspector Byrnes has in custody at Police Headquarters a young man named Burton Leach, who is accused of grand larceny.

"I can't give you any information at present. I must wait until I see Inspector Byrnes or hear from him."

ROMANCE OF THE BOWERY.
AN ELOPEMENT WHICH HAS FURNISHED FOOD FOR GOSSIPS.

Mr. Heimerdinger loved Miss Ebenstein, but her father objected. Their House Adjunct and his sister Her through the Seattle at Night—The Happy Pair Spending Their Honeymoon at Long Branch.

An interesting story of a Bowery elopement has been reported at Police Headquarters. The dramatic person in the alleged episode of social life in the Bowery are "Burt" Heimerdinger, one of the brothers who compose the firm of custom tailors, Taylor, Cutter & Co., at Prince street and the Bowery, and the pretty and vivacious daughter of Solomon H. Heimerdinger, a well-known jeweler, doing business at 236 Bowery, next door to the tailor.

The young people were lovers, but for some reason objection was made by the girl's mother to their early marriage.

Miss Ebenstein is nineteen and considered that she should have the decisive vote in a matter concerning her life's happiness.

AT CAROLIN'S BIER.
Crowds of People Try to See the Dead Murderer's Body.

The Eldridge Street Police Called Upon to Preserve Order.

The Remains to Be Interred in Calvary Cemetery To-Morrow.

Charles Ferdinand Carolin, the murderer, was duly executed, but he is still causing serious annoyance. Undertaker A. Stolzenberger will be glad when the body is buried and out of his hands.

His establishment is at 82 Stanton street. He took charge of the body in the Tombs yard under the gallows tree, a few minutes after the execution, yesterday morning.

A GREAT ONION EAT.
Ledges and Coffee's Struggle with Connecticut Seedlings.

The Former Wins the Stake-Money by Only Three Onions.

Pretty Mrs. Steve Brodie Held the Money, While Her Husband Seconded the Loser.

A new and fascinating variation in sport took place this morning, at 8.30, in Steve Brodie's saloon on the Bowery. Two braves, one of Gotham, the other of Connecticut, leaped into the arena and ate onions for a solid hour for a bet of $10.

The antagonists were Lewis Ledger, the New York man, and doughty James Coffee, the Connecticut leader.

EXTRA
2 O'CLOCK.
LEGITIME IS GONE.

Hippolyte's Victory Complete and the Haytian War Ended.

The Town of Port au Prince Occupied on Friday.

A Riot Feared, but Gherardi Trying to Prevent It.

Legitimate has accepted terms offered, and embarked Tuesday afternoon on board a French corvette. Not known where he will go.

NEW ELIXIR TRIALS
Prominent City Physicians Taking It Up with Interest.

Some new and interesting experiments are being made in this city with the Brown-Sequard elixir. Physicians of high standing have taken it up with the greatest interest, and the reports in most cases are too favorable to warrant an easy-going scepticism in laughing at the whole thing.

Dr. Lesser, of 311 East Fifth street, a graduate of the medical department of Berlin University, has experimented with the elixir, having treated fully twenty-two patients.

Dr. Lesser's patients represented various pathological conditions, and the effect upon each of the Brown-Sequard prescription was varied.

In several instances the results have been so beneficial and the virtues of the treatment so apparent that Dr. Lesser is strongly inclined to regard it as all that has been claimed.

Dr. Lesser's patients, Charles Schneider, of 305 East One Hundred and Third street, was relieved, a few days after using the elixir, of a severe attack of rheumatism, which had deprived him of the use of his hands. A banker was also relieved, as well as Mr. Zimmer, a pleuritic patient, three days after he began to use the elixir.

In the other cases the effect was neutral, that is the patient entered no harm if he failed, and recovered in any event.

Dr. Lesser says with great good sense: "It is not really fair to call these experiments unscientific if they are made in a scientific way. The condition of the patient should be known, his blood microscopically examined and his general tone remarked, and this both before and after injecting the elixir."

The elixir must be in a condition suitable for its reception. I think that probably it is the micro-organisms of the fluid that is the effective principle of its action, rather than its chemical constitution."

The fluid is made in the following way, according to Dr. Lesser: The glands should be removed from the animal as soon as it is killed and washed in distilled water at 60 degrees temperature. The capsule must then be opened and the active portions of the gland removed and placed in a heated mortar. It should be crushed and the juice squeezed through muslin and then through an albert cotton, and lastly through fibrillose paper.

The instruments and apparatus used during this treatment of the material should be 300 degrees Fahrenheit. They may be cooled by cooling in water, and then dried in a vacuum. The fluid is then ready for injection.

Dr. Lesser advances two very important views about the elixir. One is that it helps on disease if the factor of a disease is present in the body. Hence it is useful for exhaustion from disease or old age.

The other is that the Brown-Sequard elixir does not make the old young. With proper precaution on there is no danger of blood-poisoning from the elixir, says Dr. Lesser.

Manhattan Beach's Big Spectacle.
The fireworks display to follow the spectacle of "The Last Days of Pompeii" at Manhattan Beach this evening promises to be the best of the season. Last Saturday night's programme will be repeated, with a number of new pieces in addition.